Dearest Kate: —

Just rec'd your darling letter of Friday. As you know by now, I have my tickets bought for May 8 with lower berth reservations. Just a little more sewing & I am practically thru. Am going to pack to-morrow. This morning I am going to the dentist, come home & sew, then - must go down to the hospital for my laundry, meet Sadie in N.Y. and do some shopping, and from there I am going to run up to the Bronx to say good bye to my uncle's family. To-morrow I expect to mean, iron & pack. Gosh! I sure have some stuff to pack. You would scarcely believe it.

Well, honey, as I told you in yesterday's letter mom is home. She is of course very weak but hope she will soon pick up. We are all trying to persuade mom to go to the Country with Henry and I think that she will do it. When I came down last, we went talk it over.

Am very happy dear, that you are a second degree mason & now I am sure you'll pass all 3. Am sure happy you like it. And as to the Phila Club, that sure did make me happy as we can have an occasional dance to go to. Now, dear, you must take me out a lot, as believe me I am sure sick & tired of being in all the time. I told mom yesterday, I think it is about time now that you and I began to live and enjoy life. What do you say?

Dear, do you know, that I have become so nervous, and worked up as I am — Especially now that the time is drawing so short. When I come down back, I will try to remember to tell you just how I spent the last month! Rush, rush & rush, never still a minute. But dear, once it is over, and I am with you, I'll make up for it.

Am going to the dentist now, so shall close with all my love, hugs & kisses, and so soon, dear — so soon!

Exclaimingly
Frances.

Just think back, I will only write to you twice more and you will only write to me, after this day, one more letter. Things do come to pass after all, ~~the~~ ~~[illegible]~~ ? I will send, to your office, the night I hear, a telegram
